

Registered Dietitian Nutritionist

Optimizing the Public's Health Through Food and Nutrition

Registered dietitian nutritionists (RDNs) are food and nutrition experts who translate the science of nutrition into practical solutions for healthy living. Working in a number of areas, RDNs advance the nutritional health of Americans and people around the world.

From providing medical nutrition therapy to offering preventative nutrition counseling, the RDN is committed to improving the nutrition and health of their patients and clients.

RDNs are Experts

Registered dietitian nutritionists draw on their science-based education and experience to provide vital food and nutrition services while helping individuals make positive lifestyle changes tailored to their unique needs.

RDNs receive extensive training that combines academic preparation with hands-on, practical patient experience. They must complete a minimum of a bachelor's degree, participate in an accredited practice program involving direct patient interaction, and pass a national registration exam.

Physicians, clients, patients, industry and government agencies all understand and value the contributions of registered dietitian nutritionists.

RDNs are Influential

Registered dietitian nutritionists (RDNs) are a major influence in purchasing, recommending and specifying products and services.

Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics members influence clients. 76% of respondents confirmed that they "speak with groups about nutrition or food choices". The same survey points to the various interactions RDNs have with clients.

of RDNs in food/nutrition management are involved in making purchases for their organizations.

About 25% of RDNs reported managing a median budget size of $374,000.

About 11% of RDNs report managing budgets of $500,000 or more.

RDNs have Reach

Practicing dietitians are everywhere and touch the lives of many. Estimates show that registered dietitian nutritionists counsel approximately 20.4 million clients/patients a year.

The Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics Spokesperson Program responds to the public's need for credible and objective food and nutrition information through media outreach. The program also establishes the RDN as the nutrition expert and food authority, and increases the visibility of the Academy and the dietetics profession. The Academy's news coverage totals more than 20 thousand media stories every year.
