Session Formats

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Format</th>
<th>Structure &amp; Style</th>
<th>Example</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Lecture       | • Formal presentation, typically presented by one to two content experts. If suggesting a third speaker, it’s important to showcase their diverse expertise and explain the distinctive qualities they will contribute to the session.
  Advanced-level content with informational slides
  • and handouts in a traditional lecture style. May include late-breaking research, case studies, program/initiative review, comparative analysis.
  Consider add a lecture enhancement to increase audience engagement! | A pediatric dietitian and a psychologist share a range of targeted strategies for supporting neurodiverse children, including customized nutritional approaches tailored to specific neurological sensitivities, emphasizing collaboration among caregivers, educators, therapists, and medical professionals. |
| Panel Discussion | • Un-/semi-scripted conversation and analysis with one Moderator and two to three Speakers of varied backgrounds
  • Discussion of diverse experiences, perspectives, and approaches, with minimal slide presentation and more active moderation | An RDN, an endocrinologist and a patient living with diabetes discuss their perspectives on, experiences with, and approaches to managing hypoglycemia.                                                                 |
| Demo          | • Live lecture or conversation with integrated video demonstrations
  • Live voiceover of video demos strongly encouraged to increase interaction and engagement
  • Recipes, instructions, and other video-related content shared via handout | An NDTR uses live lecture and video demonstration to present “recipe makeovers” – plant-based recipes and desserts that are delicious, low in saturated fat, and high in fiber. |
| Interview      | • Conversational interview with preeminent expert(s) in field
  • Interview should explore the unique and diverse experiences, research, approaches and/or perspectives of expert(s) on topic
  • While educational, may be more personal/informal in nature, and may have broader or indirect practice applications | • An RDN interviews two CEOs of diverse ethnic backgrounds on the disparities and challenges they faced based on their race, color, or ethnicity, as well as opportunities and strategies to create pathways for inclusive recruitment and upward mobility. |
| Debate         | • Two experts present competing cases (a series of arguments in support of a viewpoint) on a topic, followed by time for structured refutation
  • Speakers represent fundamentally different viewpoints which clash (are mutually exclusive); Speakers directly (but respectfully!) challenge and respond to each other during event
  • Topics should drive broader conversations about the direction of the profession, the role of the dietitian, the concept of health, interpretations of scientific evidence, etc. | Two experts debate whether taxes on certain foods are a just and effective solution to the diabetes epidemic.                                                                                           |

The Committee for Lifelong Learning is always seeking new and exciting session formats—submit yours, with a brief description of the format structure, via the FNCE® submissions portal. New formats will be reviewed using the same criteria as other proposals.