

FNCE[®] 2023

Food & Nutrition Conference & Expo[®]

Denver, CO | October 7-10

FNCE[®] & YOUR ORGANIZATION

Your best and brightest employees should join us at FNCE[®] this year.

Over 56% of FNCE[®] 2022 attendees received full or partial financial assistance from their employers. Employers are realizing that attending FNCE[®] is an affordable way to promote employee development and raise the level of care for clients and service to customers.

FNCE[®] consistently receives high satisfaction and value scores. It offers a positive return on your investment. In just four days, your employees have access to:

- Over 100 educational sessions spanning a number of practice settings.
- The Expo providing face-to-face interactions with companies who have the products and services your business needs.
- Access to hands-on training opportunities so your staff is properly trained in NICU calculations and indirect calorimetry.
- Insights into the latest research and trends through the FNCE[®] Spotlight Stage, Expo Theatre and Learning Lounge.

Because it's the world's largest meeting of food and nutrition professionals, your staff will be able to network with experts in a variety of practice settings. All education is outcomes-based with the resources needed to quickly apply new learnings into practice. This may reduce the need to attend other conferences or join other associations or groups, reducing costs and additional time away from the office.

Your staff will return from FNCE[®] recharged and inspired. All of this positively impacts your business.

Make the decision to fund your staff's attendance to this year's FNCE[®]! Group rates are available.
